She was the first woman to win a Nobel Prize, the first person and only woman to win the Nobel Prize twice, and the only person to win the Nobel Prize in two scientific fields. Her achievements included a theory of radioactivity (a term that she coined), techniques for isolating radioactive isotopes, and the discovery of two new elements, polonium and radium. Under her direction, the world's first studies were conducted into the treatment of neoplasms, using radioactive isotopes. During World War I, she developed mobile X-ray units to help diagnose injuries at field hospitals. While an actively loyal French citizen, she never formally lost her Polish identity. She named the first new chemical element she discovered polonium, after her native country." Which of the following achievements demonstrates Marie Curie's expertise in chemistry? (A) Developing mobile X-ray units (B) Discovering polonium and radium (C) Winning the Nobel Prize in Physics (D) Conducting research on neoplasms
